

PENSACOLA MAN COMPLIMENTED

GENEROSITY OF COACH OF PENSACOLA FOOTBALL TEAM IS COMMENTED ON BY MOBILE PAPER.

The Mobile Register of recent date contained the following regarding the football game played there in which the Pensacola Classical School team participated:

The delegation of visiting Japanese which saw the game of football last Saturday between Harvard and Brown was very much impressed by the game. They did not understand the fine points of play, but they saw something deeper than most people see in football.

The game has been a rough one and there have been many injuries therefrom, yet football stands out today as one game which teaches the manhood of America several very important lessons.

The nation whose boys are devoted to the grueling contest of the grueling is not a nation of mollycoddles. Of that the Japanese felt certain, and so must we, too, when we look at a clean game of football.

Years ago it was reported that the Duke of Wellington said that the battle of Waterloo was won on the football field at Eton. The saying has been very authoritatively contradicted, of course, yet it stands as a very popular legend. But when you multiply the field at Eton by several hundred, you have the fighting force and the energizing spirit of the American nation.

The latent powers of a big nation are shown well on the fields of high schools and colleges where young men are trained to hit the line hard, go low, keep the face to the front and never give up till the whistle blows. No young man may play the game who is a physical or a moral coward. The yellow streak shows in him quickly and he is taken out. Rules are made and adhered to, and the players are taught to play clean football. There are many, many moments in the game, in the stress of losses and gains, when the temper of the average man would be lost, when he would become nervous, unfit for his work; but, when that moment comes, the trained football player keeps his temper, his wits are working smoothly and fast, his nerves are under his control, and when the supreme moment is reached, a little critical opportunity that must be seized in a second time, the trained player leaps forward and the game is won.

Last Saturday the game between one of Mobile's teams and one from Pensacola developed a pretty fact. A Mobile lad, one of the strongest on the team, had just finished a long, brilliant run, which had scored the winning touchdown. In doing so, however, his thumb was injured slightly, though sufficiently for the game to stop a few moments. The two minutes allowed for rest passed, and the Pensacola timekeeper called for the game to continue.

It meant that the Mobile player must drop out of the game. Thereby a new and weaker player would be substituted and the strength of the team would be lost.

But the coach of Pensacola's team, the one who hoped most for a winning team, who had worked hardest to achieve victory, stepped forward and announced that the game would not continue until the Mobile player might enter the game.

He called a young physician, the thumb was bandaged, and the game continued.

It was a case of genuine generosity, developed out of the love of sport for sport's own sake.

Football has its disadvantages. It is a game where injuries come. But it is a game where marrow is put into the bones and steel is put into the heart; where courage prevails and quick wit wins against brute strength.

Lived 152 Years.

Wm. Parr—England's oldest man—married the third time at 120, worked in the fields till 132 and lived 29 years longer. People should be youthful at 80. James Wright, of Spurlock, Ky., shows how to remain young. "I feel just like a 16-year-old boy," he writes, "after taking six bottles of Electric Bitters. For thirty years Kidney trouble made life a burden, but the first bottle of this wonderful medicine convinced me I had found the greatest cure on earth." SEMINOLES MAY LEAVE FLORIDA

CHIEF TIGER TAIL IS GOING TO THE WEST—WHOLE TRIBE MAY FOLLOW—CIVILIZED INDIANS OF THAT SECTION RESPONSIBLE.

That a portion of the Seminole tribe of Indians may be induced to forsake their favorite hunting grounds in the Everglades by messengers from the tribe in the west, and follow them to the more civilized life of the tribal reservation in the Indian Territory, now seems a possibility, says the Jacksonville Metropolis.

If the deed is done a handful of Christian Indians will have accomplished what the United States government gave up trying to do after a quarter century of futile and bloody struggle.

A small band from the Territorial Seminoles, who have been converted to Christianity, is now holding meetings at Jupiter, on the lower east coast, and the meetings are being attended by scores of Seminoles from different sections of the Everglades. Besides preaching the doctrines of their adopted faith, the visiting Indians are urging their Florida brothers to forsake the alligator trail of the Everglades and the hunting rifle and follow them to tilled fields and the plow of the reservation.

Tiger Tail Going West.

Chief Tiger Tail, who is reputed to be one of the wealthiest members of the Florida tribe, and who is an Indian of more than usual intellect, was in Titusville during the last week and in discussing the matter expressed his intention of going west next summer and trying it for himself. If he likes it he will sell his belongings in Florida and make his home on the reservation, and it is probable that his action would exert an influence upon other members of the tribe to follow him. The change would not be a great for him, however, as for the average tribesman, for he makes his wealth by stock raising more than by the use of his rifle, like the majority of the Seminoles.

But though some members of the tribe may follow the steel-railed trail to the reservation in the west, it is very improbable that the entire tribe can ever be induced to go in a body. It is a well known fact that the love of his native hunting grounds is as strong in the breast of the Seminole as is the love of his native state to the Floridian.

This was well illustrated by an incident at Ft. Myers during the Indian wars of the last century. The federal troops had captured a number of the Seminoles and were holding them at Ft. Myers for transportation by boat across the gulf, en route to the lands allotted by the government for the purpose.

Seminoles are suspicious. In the captured party was a chief who declared that he would never leave his beloved state alive. He was kept closely guarded, however, and was allowed to reach his weapon as it was believed that he might commit suicide. He outwitted his captors, however, and kept his promise, for when the morning came for the schooner bearing the Indians to set sail he dropped dead upon the wharf a few feet from the rail of the vessel that was to bear him away. He had secured a bottle, and, crushing the glass, had swallowed the particles. The explosion caused by the walk from the prison to the wharf caused the glass to cut him internally and to cause a hemorrhage.

From the day when the government by force of arms deported a part of the tribe and then finally gave up the capture of all remaining, the Seminoles have regarded Uncle Sam with suspicion. It was the fear that the white man was planning a ruse to get the tribe together and then capture it in its entirety that made a failure of the expedition planned by Bishop Gray a few years ago.

The Episcopal church has done much for the Seminoles, and with the hospital at Immokalee has healed the sick and suffering as well as worked for their conversion. The bishop desired to get the tribe together at a great banquet or gathering as an evidence of the good will of the church toward them. But the tribe could not be brought together. At the present time, however, the Indians regard the whites at Immokalee in more kindly light, for they have good cause to realize that the efforts made there are for the good of the Seminoles.

Seminoles Failed to Go.

A few years ago it was planned to have a Seminole camp as an attraction at the State Fair at Tampa. Arrangements had almost been completed to bring some of the tribe to the city when it was noted about in the tribe that a troop of United States cavalry was a crack United States troop and was there to give exhibition drills. But there was no Seminole camp at Tampa.

The Seminole has an aversion for the ways of the civilized. He prefers to pass his life in the deep fastnesses of the great Everglades and the dense hammocks of the lower gulf coast. He grows sweet potatoes on the rich hammock land and the palmetto provides him with a ready market for the hide of the alligator and the fur of the otter. He is a son of the Everglades, and in the Everglades he, as a tribe, will remain.

TRAMPING TO PHILADELPHIA

TWO YOUNG MEN "FOOTING IT" FROM JACKSONVILLE — ARE CULTURED AND REFINED—LEFT HOME EXPECTING TO GROW ORANGES.

Two well-dressed young men, of refined appearance, walked into police headquarters in Charleston, S. C., late Saturday night and asked for a night's shelter, stating that they were "putting the rails" from Jacksonville to Philadelphia, Pa., and were at present on their way home, says the News and Courier. They gave their names as being E. J. Jolley and F. C. Webb, both living in St. David's, sixteen miles north of Philadelphia, and stated that they left Jacksonville, Fla., Monday, October 18th, struck Savannah Thursday evening, and Charleston Saturday evening. They expected to reach their homes in about ten days' time. Jolley said that his father was in the copper business and kept an establishment at No. 42 North Fifth street, in Philadelphia. Webb's father was stated to be an expressman in the City of Brotherly Love.

Both Quite Young.

The young men left Charleston for Columbia early Sunday morning. Both are about 19 years of age, and are tramping the distance from the Florida metropolis to Philadelphia for the sake of experience. They left college last summer, and without letting their parents know of their plans, decided to go into the orange farming business in Florida. They made the trip south about three weeks ago in a steamer, and upon their arrival in Jacksonville made inquiries about the orange groves in Miami. What they heard about them seemed to have taken all the wind out of their sails, and after only a few hours' stay in Jacksonville they decided to return home. Being ashamed, however, of facing their friends and relatives without having accomplished anything during their absence, they thought that the best plan would be to "hook it back," and thus to get some experience even if they did return with empty pockets. They agreed on the plan all the more quickly because of the fact that they possessed no return tickets and no great quantity of spare cash.

Hardships Encountered.

When the youths first left Jacksonville it was with the feeling that they were entering upon a lark, especially so as the sun was shining and no cloud appeared in the blue sky. But they had reckoned without tender feet, rainy weather and unsympathetic people to be met on the way. The bundles containing their extra clothes, which when the trip was commenced only weighed about a pound, gradually assumed the weight of tons as the days advanced, and their feet, unused to such exertions, were covered with blisters from contact with the hard cross-ties which they were stepping. Jolley stated that although they had experienced agonies during the first two days of the journey from the sore extremities, they managed to tramp from thirty to thirty-five miles every day. What money they possessed was being spent for food, while the nights were spent in the various police stations which they came across, or in barns, hay piles or other places of refuge. They had the usual number of thrilling experiences met with by cross-country pedestrians to relate, among them being the meeting of a fast express train on a long and narrow trestle in the middle of the night, and the subsequent hanging to cross-ties while the train rushed over their heads; battles with angry dogs, experiences with the police of various cities and towns and others. Jolley and his companion will follow the tracks of the Atlantic Coast Line railway until they reach Washington, when those of the Pennsylvania system will be used until their home is sighted.
